Mina Zikri is a music director of the Northbrook Symphony Orchestra and the Oistrakh Symphony of Chicago. As a violinist and assistant conductor to Daniel Barenboim, he performs with the West-Eastern Divan Orchestra on their annual tours to major music festivals and concert halls around the world.

The Betty Haag Academy of Music in Arlington Heights was founded by violinist Betty Haag-Kuhnke, who for the past 40 years has offered musical instruction in violin, viola, piano, note reading, and repertoire classes to children of all ages and races. Academy students have performed at Carnegie Hall, the White House, Vatican City in Italy and enjoyed concert tours all over Europe. Celebrated artists, such as Ricci, Midori, Gluzman, Rosand, Shaham, Repin, and Gingold, have worked directly with its violin students, creating experiences that will influence the rest of their lives. Students of all levels of proficiency are offered opportunities to perform in repertoire classes, recitals, solo appearances, and the Academy's annual Chicago Symphony Center concert.

Members of the Oistrakh Symphony of Chicago

The Oistrakh Symphony of Chicago was founded in 2005. The orchestra draws young professionals and recent graduates from major music programs in the Chicago area, in particular the DePaul University School of Music, with whom it has a strong professional relationship. The mission of the Oistrakh Symphony of Chicago is to offer audiences and musicians exposure to a broad classical repertoire performed at the highest level.
